

Driny

I'm Martin and I'm sitting and writing about my experiences in the cave Driny. We travelled there because it was our school trip. When we arrived, we had to walk our way up the hill where the cave is located. When we got almost to the top of the hill, we saw toilets, so we went a few stairs up and we were finally in front of the entrance to the cave. On the right of the entrance was a souvenir shop. Unfortunately, the shop was closed. A man came out of the shop, introduced himself and opened the gate leading into the cave. The air in the cave was cold and wet as well as the walls. Along our journey in the cave we saw different kinds of minerals, rocks in the shape of human faces, stalagtites, stalagmites, small water pools, etc..... The water dripping from the ceiling was cold. The man stopped a few times along our way. He switched off the lights a few times as well, and I'm not sure why. When we got out the man opened the shop. I didn't buy anything there. Then we walked all the way back to the bus and continued our trip. I really liked it in the cave and I'm hoping to visit it at least once more.
